The drowning machine

Last night's storm was a real test for the city's drainage system. The streets were flooded, and the water was everywhere. It was a scary experience, and it was a reminder of the importance of a good drainage system.

The city's drainage system is a complex system of pipes and channels that collect and remove rainwater from the streets. It's a system that is essential for the city's safety and health, and it's a system that needs to be maintained and improved.

NHS music booster highlights

The NHS music booster has been a great success. It has brought together a group of talented musicians who have been working hard to improve their skills and to perform at a high level. The booster has been a great opportunity for them to learn from each other and to share their passion for music.
